Oven in the Earth - Hangi  10

Where does your family cook? Traditionally, Maori people don't cook their food in the kitchen; they cook it in the ground! First, they dig a hole into the earth and heat it up. Then, they put in meat and vegetables, and cover the hole with wet cloth and dirt. The food stays in the ground until it's cooked. Finally, it's served on plant leaves to be enjoyed by everyone. People talk, laugh, and share the food from Mother Earth. With friends and family around, it tastes even better!
