A More Difficult Challenge for the Sherpas  10

The Sherpa people of Nepal are the best in the world at climbing mountains. They grow up in the Himalayas, and some of them learn how to climb at a much younger age. For their livelihoods, they often rely on farming, but they also make money from guiding hikers to the top of Mount Everest, our planet's tallest mountain.

These days, however, the Sherpas are more and more worried about climate change. The snow and ice on Everest are melting faster than ever! It becomes difficult for climbers to stay on Everest. Also, it's making conditions more dangerous for Sherpas to live in the valley below. How will they survive?

A Read and choose.

 - Sherpas are the best at climbing Mount Everest.
 - Sherpas' lives are in danger because of climate change.
 - More snow is falling on Mount Everest because of climate change.
- Which underlined word means "becoming soft or watery because of heat"?
 - Sherpa people grow up in the Himalayas.
 - They guide hikers to reach the top of Mount Everest.
 - Snow and ice will melt faster than ever.
- What can we guess about Sherpas from this reading?
 - Few of them have ever seen a mountain.
 - Most of them don't mind climate change.
 - Many of them have climbed Mount Everest.
- In this reading, livelihood means _____.
 - a job or a way to help you live
 - a special Sherpa hat for the snow
 - the tallest tree on a mountain
